

SCOTT “THE DIVERSIFIER” ZUCKERMAN

Scott “The Diversifier” Zuckerman, a resident of Bellmore, decided he wasn’t going to just sit ringside and watch the Long Island Fight for Charity main event in November at the Hilton. Be aware, he’s a Certified Martial Arts Instructor with a martial arts black belt. It’s doubtful that training will be a struggle for this swift and agile mastermind. For Scott, taking part in the 10th main event is all about giving back and showing others why it is so important.

President and CEO of Wexford Financial Strategies, an independently owned comprehensive financial planning firm located in Woodmere, Scott is no stranger to charitable endeavors. “I grew up in a philanthropic family that has been recognized by several important organizations, and I want to be able to follow in their footsteps,” he remarked. It is noteworthy to mention that Scott has been instrumental in raising over $250,000 each year over the last several years to support the Diabetes Research Institute Foundation.

The Fight for Charity mission surely fits into Scott’s life plan, as does the unique and exciting aspects of the main event – particularly the chance to go toe-to-toe in a bout against another businessperson. “The Diversifier” says he does not have a “glass jaw”, and contends that while training is important, he likes spending his time encouraging others to contribute to worthy causes like Fight for Charity’s mission of raising funds to ensure that programs for the less fortunate survive.
